Passports: Information on Travel Documents

(TL:VISA-215; 10-24-2000)

Niger's new style passports are enhanced with anti-fraud features. The regular passports are deep purple in color (previously bright green), while the official passports are deep blue (previously bright red), and the diplomatic passports are charcoal in color, replacing the light gray. The diplomatic passport, which was previously larger, is now the same size as the others. The new security features, visible only under U-V light include the word Niger and a grain-head motif in bright blue that is repeated across the photo page. The national seal of Niger is located in the center of each page in yellow green. The page numbers are encircled and are shown sequentially above the seal. Numerous short bright red and blue lines appear on all pages, and the passport stitching is bright blue when opened between pages 16 and 17.

Old style passports were recalled and replaced in early 1998.

Niger recently centralized the issuance of all passports in a new control unit within the national police (DST). Previously, passports were issued by police departments and the Niger Embassies without approval from Niamey. Henceforth, those posts and missions may only accept applications and forward them to Niamey for approval and issuance.
